NO MORE DIY TRAVEL PLANNING FOR YOU!

When you DIY anything in life, you take on risks. Sometimes it's a calculated risk because the consequences (if anything goes wrong) are minimal.

Other things, the risk is too high – medical procedures, home renovations, cutting down a tree, and even cutting your own hair.

Planning travel, especially out of the country, is something that should also be left to qualified and professional experts.

Look at some of the most frequent problems that DIY travel planners have:

- Missed flights
- Awful hotel rooms that don't match the brochure-like images
- Travel insurance that doesn't actually work when you need it
- Waiting on hold for days at a time for cruise lines, hotels, and tour companies when you have a question or need help
- Tired and frustrated fellow travelers
- Wasted time trying to get from A to B
- Under-planning
- Over-planning
- Poor document preparation
- Denied entry and re-entry
- Finding out activities and sites are closed or limited when you arrive
- Struggling to find dining options in a limited capacity or busy seasons
